Demi Moore and Bruce Willis Win the First Annual Celebrity Co-Parent Awards

Rosalind Sedacca, CCT, founder of National Child-Centered Divorce Month in July, and Cynthia Tiano, Esq., creator of the Celebrity Co-Parent Awards, have announced that Demi Moore and Bruce Willis are the winners of the first annual Celebrity Co-Parent Awards.

West Palm, FL, July 29, 2008 --(PR.com)-- Rosalind Sedacca, CCT, founder of National Child-Centered Divorce Month in July, and Cynthia Tiano, Esq., creator of the Celebrity Co-Parent Awards, have announced that Demi Moore and Bruce Willis are the winners of the first annual Celebrity Co-Parent Awards.

"These two parents are ideal role models for families facing the challenges of divorce," says Sedacca, a Certified Corporate Trainer and author of the book, How Do I Tell the Kids about the Divorce? A Create-a-Storybook Guide to Preparing Your Children -- with Love! "Demi and Bruce have demonstrated all the qualities of a Child-Centered Divorce: responsible, loving and respectful co-parenting that puts the children's emotional needs first when making any parenting decisions."

Celebrity divorces have too often been examples of divorce gone wrong. Most recently there has been lots of negative publicity around celebrity divorces and plenty of commentary about how it effects their children.

Too often divorcing celebrity couples play out in public arenas dramatic exaggerations of what many other people are experiencing in private. They get caught up in a never-ending spiral of negativity and pain. And, until now, the media has focused on catching these celebrities acting out the anger and pain of their breakups in the courtroom.

"It's time to focus on and acknowledge those celebrities who have demonstrated a commitment to working together and placing their children first even during the toughest of times," says Cynthia Tiano, Esq., a 26-year divorce attorney turned mediator and author of Happily Divorced! Secrets of the Win-Win Formula. "All of our celebrity co-parent contenders deserve recognition for their efforts to create peaceful divorces for themselves and their children. It was a difficult decision to select one couple, but Demi and Bruce's commitment to respectful co-parenting for their children has withstood the test of time," says Tiano.

Demi Moore has been candid and open about her own parents' divorce, and how it has solidified her commitment to getting along with her ex, Bruce Willis. "I'm the product of divorced parents, and my brother and I were the pawns in my parents' game. I never wanted that for my kids", said Moore. "At that time, I could not have seen what a gift that situation was, but without that experience, I would not have known there was a different choice to make in my own divorce."

About her own co-parenting relationship with Bruce Willis, Moore says, "We get so much from being able to share holidays and spend time with all of us together. The kids don't have to choose. They're getting double the support, double the love, double the encouragement."

And how does Demi's hubby Ashton Kutcher feel about it all? About Bruce Willis, Kutcher says, "He shares the three most precious things in his life with me. If I didn't honor that, I would be an idiot."

The other contenders for the award were Robin Williams and his soon-to-be former wife Marsha, who have publicly committed to using the Collaborative Divorce model which avoids acrimonious litigation to achieve a peaceful outcome. Vanessa Williams and her two exes, Rick Fox and Ramon Hervey, who celebrate holidays together as one family were also acknowledged for keeping the well-being of their children in mind and providing an atmosphere of love and respect among the parent figures in their lives.

During Child-Centered Divorce Month, Sedacca and Tiano are passionate about enlisting the nation's legal and therapeutic communities to bring a heightened awareness to parents about how deeply their children are affected by their behavior toward each other. "We can never overemphasize how dramatically parental decisions about divorce can affect their children – in the short-term and for years to come," notes Sedacca.

The Child-Centered and Peaceful Divorce communities are honored to recognize those celebrities who co-parent their children with respect toward each other, and extend a sincere salute to Demi Moore and Bruce Willis, winners of the First Annual Celebrity Co-Parent Awards for their peaceful post-divorce co-parenting. They encourage Demi and Bruce to speak out offering parenting advice they can share with others walking in their shoes.

During Child-Centered Divorce Month, and thereafter, the professional peaceful divorce community will be providing insights, tips and effective strategies for creating positive divorces for children and parents through interviews, teleseminars, workshops and other events.
